BRAINSTORMS With FERRIN COX

The Alabama House of Representatives has voted to override the veto of Governor Wallace on the adult status for 19 year olds. The only question was on the right to buy beer and whiskey before age 21. I understand and appreciate the concern of the governor and those encouraging him to hold out for this exception but. . .from the time a teenager wants a "drink" until he gets of the age to purchase it legally there always seems When I was in high school, just as today, it is available right in town to anyone who wants to buy it. I personally saw a group of my high school classmates buy a whole case of vodka from a licensed seller and not one of them was even eighteen. Now, this was in Florida, but the system works nationwide, just look at the beer bottles at the recreation center or at the Big Bear parking lot any morning of the week.

I experienced a personal shock when the news broke that Public Service Commissioner Kenneth Hammonds was charged in an extortion attempt. I like Hammonds and really don't want to believe the charges. Yet, Attorney General Bill Baxley is not the case is Rex Moore, formerly of Opp. Mr. Moore's name has been linked with the case of former Attorney General Richmond Flowers, who actually served some jail time for wrongdoings while he was in office. While I know none of the facts in the present case, my mind is open to the fact that it could be a two way street or that the other side is actually the guilty party. Maybe us Alabama taxpayers will in time learn the true facts in the case, as well we should. Hammonds is a public servant and should make his decisions on merit and not on who pays the most. Also, if he is not guilty, Hammonds deserves to be cleared.

As predicted here several weeks ago, the parking meters in Elba lost a little support at City Hall. It appeared to observers Tuesday night that the majority of the group had been persuaded to take them out, but after voting not to buy used machines, further action was tabled until the next meeting. (Next Tuesday).

The recent ruling by the Alabama Supreme Court is causing some rumblings in government offices. The court ruled that government can be liable for careless actions. Historically and they are buying all kinds of insurance and bracing for a rash of law suits as dollar hunting citizens sue for every bruise on the arm. I wish there was a happy medium, but there isn't.

By the time this article reaches our readers, I will be long gone. . .for several days. It is time for the summer convention of the Alabama Press Association and Heddy and I are attending. We will be back Saturday full of rest and new ideas. We will be at Point Aquarius, in North Alabama, but will not be chasing that little hard ball around the fancy golf courses, but I might slip off from Heddy and get in a few minutes of fishing early one morning!

CONSTITUTIONAL REFORM

GOVERNMENT

In an earlier column this year, I noted that "the Alabama Constitution has the dubious distinction of being the most outdated and heavily amended state constitution in the land." Many provisions of our 1901 constitution are cumbersome and overly restrictive. A number of bills are now pending in the Legislature to bring about reforms and streamlining in this area. The first phase of the constitutional reform package was passed in 1973 and approved by a vote of the people. This, of course, was the Judicial Article which has received nationwide acclaim. implementation of the Judicial Article will be considered by the Legislature this summer. It has received more than a little opposition in both the House and Senate, primarily because of the cost involved in the implementation. Hopefully, the problems will be resolved during the current session. The second phase of the reform effort concerned the Legislature itself in the form of "annual sessions." There is much yet to be done in the area of legislative reform, much of which will require constitutional change. Before annual sessions will improve the legislative process, a great deal more must be done to upgrade the Legislature. There have been a number of bills introduced to substantially change the Constitution. Examples are reform of the executive branch of state government and "ome Rule" for local governments in Alabama. Presently, there are some 40 bills pending which directly relate to constitutional reform. Specific information will be supplied on request.
